

Why I Need My Education?

UNDERSTANDING THE NEED

"Why I Need My Education," Student's Dedication and Commitment to Education Creed, is a high impact positive behavior modification concept. The Education Creed was written because of the recognition of the absence of a national, motivating, comprehensive, yet simplified explanation to youth, the need for an adequate education in preparation for a quality standard of life. This initiative focuses on the reality of the potential positive impact of the statistical results of a one question-one response survey, if conducted, of all adults in the industrialized nations of the world. That one question-one response survey is presented as follows: "Please state for students, one reason that you would provide as to, "Why education is important." The resulting united adult responses generate an extremely, powerful, spreadsheet database of expressions to adolescents of the importance of education. This Student's Dedication and Commitment to Education Creed is composed of a minimum of thirty-three "real-life reasons" for education. The Education Creed facilitates positive behavior modification and is designed to inspire and motivate students to aggressively pursue a quality education. Upon interface with the mental and emotional states of youth or committed to memory, this education creed acts in a manner as a powerful anti-virus computer program for the mind. It continuously reinforces in students, the drive to seek and obtain a quality education for life. It is designed to identify and establish unity of purpose between students, parents, educators, and the community in the pursuit of quality and excellence in education.
